Overview

Before a commercial property can be handed over to the client, the entire building has to be thoroughly cleaned. One of the most important reasons for this, besides a clean building, is to give the client clear access to identifying possible internal defects to the windows, walls, floors and other materials. At Munters we employ experienced cleaners to undertake the cleaning process; providing clients with a pristine property ready for handover.

Munters recognise that delays in completing building projects will lead to financial penalties, loss of reputation and ultimately loss of business long term. That is why our experienced cleaners can be on-site within hours of appointment to immediately and cost effectively clean the property.

Our deep understanding of the construction process enables Munters to accurately provide the most appropriate cleaning action plan for each specific project. Ensuring legal requirements and critically, deadlines are achieved.

Munters' technical construction experience across all areas enables a service that guarantees fast, customer-specific and innovative solutions. Other construction related services that Munters are able to utilise include the application of dry- and heating techniques and leak detection techniques.
